The sign of a great institution of higher learning is its ability to adapt to the needs of its students while striving to maintain a high quality of educational tradition.

Eastern Kentucky University has upheld a superb commitment to education. Yet in this era of change, the University is allowing transition within traditional values. This expresses its commitment to its most important asset — the students.

To the 13,000 individuals who call this institution home the changes are becoming increasingly evident. In the midst of these alterations the University's timeless traditions retain their clarity.

Richmond was chosen the sight of Central University in 1874 beginning a 113-year commitment to challenging its students to adapt to the demands of an ever-changing world.

Eastern Kentucky University was established in 1966 as one of Kentucky's leading educational institutions with a solid foundation of tradition.

Those responsible for leading the University realize the importance of flexibility to stay abreast of modern educational society. At the same time, those leaders understand the caution with which they must permit, accept and encourage change. The University is guided by the needs of the generations it has served. Its greatness is recognized in its compassionate struggle to adapt to those needs.

The University has achieved a unique balance in that it welcomes the future with open minds and clings to the past with warm hearts.

The willingness to mold itself to the increasingly demanding needs of students paired with its persistent maintenance of traditional values establishes Eastern Kentucky University as a respected tradition undergoing important transition in higher education.

Students Escape To

Sultry island music, bright shorts, and T-shirts combined to set the mood in Alumni Coliseum for the April 2 escape to "Margaritaville."

Jimmy Buffett was our host for a two-and-one-half hour spring break. The University Center Board sponsored Buffett's fourth visit to the University since 1974. He said that he "had a great time doing the show and was glad to be back in Richmond."

Buffett and his band, The King Kong Trio, played classics such as "Changes in Latitude, Changes in Attitude", "Come Monday", and "Why Don't We Get Drunk?" to about 5,500 fans.

"Margaritaville" followers can look forward to a movie based on the song in the future.

According to Buffett he has been working on a children's album and after that is going to start on the screenplay.

Buffett's laid back island music provided the perfect relief to the unseasonably cool spring evening with thoughts of "Cheeseburgers in Paradise."

A small rural town of Zion, Indiana during the 1930's was the setting for the University's Department of Speech and Theatre's first production of the year, "The Diviners."

Michael Sorg, a sophomore theatre production veteran, portrayed Buddy Layman, a pathetic 14-year old whose naive and carefree attitude reflects his four-year old child's mentality.

As the play opened, Buddy was searching for water. The audience quickly realized that he has an irrational fear of water that was attributed to a childhood accident where his mother drowned. Buddy's antics — including reference to himself in the third person and chasing birds through the forest — delighted the Gifford Theatre audience.

Buddy's life takes a turn when C.C. Showers moves to Zion. The intelligent, mature 30-year old former preacher befriends Buddy. Danny Stanley gave a powerful performance as Showers. The associate degree nursing student emphasizes the contrasts as the bonds of friendship solidified. C.C., in his efforts to help Buddy mature, wanted to give him a bath. His unbelievable fear of water had allowed him to avoid bathing since his mother's death. The first step was washing his feet. They discovered he was infected with ringworm, so C.C. persisted in encouraging him to take a bath.

Throughout the production, the casualness of the small Mid-Western town was exemplified through the supporting player's mannerisms and convincing dialect.

The action culminated with C.C. and Buddy going to the river to take a bath. The townspeople misunderstood and flocked to the river to celebrate the apparent baptism. While C.C. tried to quiet them he let go of his companion. Buddy drowned.

The irony of the story was evident in that the boy's detrimental fear led to his demise.

Georgia Satellites

The Georgia Satellites brought their Southern style of rock music to the University on Sept. 23 when the Atlanta-based band performed in Brock Auditorium. The band, consisting of Dan Baird, Rick Richards, Rick Price, and Mauro Mangellan, performed a tribute to vintage rock by playing some of their favorite tunes by Rod Stewart, the Rolling Stones, and Jerry Lee Lewis. About 1200 fans spent the last 30 minutes of the two-hour show on their feet and dancing in the aisles. Nashville's The Questionnaires opened for the Satellites.

The band's only major release album, "Georgia Satellites", remained at 176 on Billboard Magazine's Top 200 Albums Chart during the group's campus visit. The album has been on the charts for over a year and has reaped the band two Top 40 hits, "Keep Your Hands to Yourself", and "Battle-ship Chains."

As the pre-game drills and tailgate parties concluded, suspense built for the 16 candidates vying for Homecoming Queen.

The ladies and their escorts crossed Hanger Field beneath the sabers of University ROTC cadets while "Evergreen" played softly in the background.

Weeks of anticipation were relieved with the announcement of the finalists. Lori Estep, a fashion merchandising major from Springfield, Ohio, who was sponsored by Alpha Delta Pi, was the second runner-up. The first runner-up was Alpha Kappa Alpha's Michelle Bollinger, a junior marketing and management major from Florissant, Mo. The 1987 Homecoming Queen, Michelle Warndoff, represented Alpha Gamma Delta. She is a senior nursing major from Hebron. While at the University, Warndoff has been very active in her sorority, serving as rush chair, Panhellenic delegate, and president.

Pre-Game Festivities

This year's Homecoming celebration will be hard to top as a display of spirit and enthusiasm. The October morning was overcast but the threatening rain held off for the annual Lancaster Avenue pre-game Homecoming parade, led by one-hundred runners in the 10th annual Homecoming run.

A large crowd turned out to enjoy nine guest high school and junior high marching bands led by the University's Marching Maroons. The fans got to see their favorite candidate as the ladies and their escorts rode in convertibles down Main Street.

The clubs and organizations provided a spectacular show of spirit with their floats. The Agriculture Club won the originality award while Theta Chi and Phi Beta Pi teamed up to take the prize for beauty.

The pre-game festivities helped pave the way for the Colonel's to go "Over The Top"!

Colonels Top Arch Rival

Colonel fans did not have to hold onto their first-score balloons long as their team wasted no time getting down to business.

The gray skies gave way to warm sunshine, creating a great afternoon for football. The Colonel's beat their arch rival, Western Hilltopper's, in front of 20,200 Hanger Field Fans.

The Colonel's scored on their first possession, one-and-a-half minutes into the game. Quarterback Lorenzo Fields rushed 70 yards for a touchdown and James Campbell converted the extra point to put the Colonel's on top, 7-0.

Colonel defense held off two scoring drives by Western to close the quarter on top of the Hilltoppers.

The second quarter brought Western closer with a field goal to close the gap to 7-3. The teams took that score to the locker room at the halfway mark.

Western recovered a Colonel fumble in the third quarter on the Hilltoppers one yard line and went on to score their first touchdown. This gave the Hilltoppers their first lead of the game, 10-7. The Colonels answered with a fumble recovery of their own late in the quarter but were still trailing into the final period.

James Campbell tied the score at 10 with his early fourth quarter field goal. Later in the quarter Campbell answered again with a three pointer to give the Colonels the lead, 13-10. The University's momentum built as Leon Johnson blocked a Western punt and scored the touchdown. Campbell was successful on the conversion and the University came out on top, 20-10, in the traditional interstate rivalry.

Seasons

The campus is as much a calendar of the year as any specific list of dates. The seasonal changes evident throughout the University community help us follow the progress of our schedules.

Autumn, with football and the start of a new year, is signaled by festive colors of the campus leaves.

Finals week is as inviting as the cold wind whistling through the buildings. Winter is here and students know the year is half over and Christmas is just around the corner.

Spring on "The Campus Beautiful" conjures thoughts of spring break as students flock to the Ravine, the track, and dorm roof tops to catch the first rays of the tanning season.

These visible transitions are constant year after year but each arrival is anxiously awaited.

NIGHT LIFE

MAKING A LIVING

Few students can still go to school on the good grace of their parents and Pell Grants. So many students have no choice but to get a job.

Of the students working, a good number serve drinks downtown.

Connie Thelen, a 22-year-old public relations major, said the job is often fast-paced, but it pays the bills.

"It's a fun job and a good way to meet a lot of people," Thelen said.

She makes close to $20 a night in tips in addition to a regular salary. Thelen works two nights a week at the Family Dog on Water Street.

Ray Medley said the bar you work at makes all the difference.

Medley is a 22-year-old senior who works at 1890's Saloon on First Street. He has worked at 90's for two years.

"I haven't worked anywhere else, but I've been to a lot of them," Medley said with a grin.

He said he enjoys working at 90's because of the relaxed atmosphere and the bar itself.

"It beats a real job," he added.

Brian McClure said he enjoys his work for the money and the social aspects.

The 21-year-old journalism major works at T-Bombadil's four nights a week.

McClure said Thursday nights are the busiest for the bar and also the best nights for tips.

"I make about 20 bucks a night, on a good night, in tips," McClure said.

He said he rarely has trouble getting a date. "Bartenders never go home alone," McClure said.

"Going downtown" for Ellen McKinley is a bit different than for other students.

The 22 year-old senior from Elizabethtown drinks, but not to extremes. Sticking mainly to tequila and orange juice, she rarely has more than two drinks in one night.

McKinley goes downtown to have a good time.

"That's where all the people are . . . a place to meet friends," she said as she put the finishing touches of make-up on before heading to First Street.

THE ARK AND COMEDY CARAVAN

"The average crowd is over 100, and after the first of the year, we would like to see 200 people a night," said Scott Madl, the Ark's executive director.

The Ark has a bar which features soft drinks instead of alcoholic beverages.

In one sense, it's the same as any other social club downtown. Students go there to get away from the pressures of campus, meet new friends and have a good time.

"But it's also different because the people we get here are the ones that feel they don't have to drink to have a good time," Mandl said.

The Ark has no Christian affiliation. The non-alcoholic, non-smoking night club plays top 40 music geared to student requests.

"We have student request cards, and if we don't have it, we'll get it," said Mandl.

The club is currently working with the local court system. Students who have been charged with alcohol-related offenses may elect to volunteer a certain number of work hours at the Ark. Three students are currently working under that program.

"The students gets to see a positive side of socializing without alcohol — in the end people might find that volunteering hours to the club is more effective than fines," said Mandl.

Students looking for an alternative to the downtown social scene can find it in Richmond's newest nightclub, The Ark.

The Ark, which operated during the 1984-85 school year in what is now Currier's Music on Main Street, drew large crowds during its first month. However, it was forced to close when the facility was withheld by the owner.

It reopened this year in early September, at the new location on South Second Street.

So far, attendance has been good.

O'Riley's Pub has brought a new national act to Richmond.

The "Comedy Caravan" now pulls in every Monday night at O'Riley's on East Main.

The club draws patrons from Richmond and abroad to come inside and share a laugh or two.

The Comedy Caravan is a group of comedians from across the United States. A new comedian is chosen every week by the Richmond Regional Director of the group to perform at O'Riley's and other clubs and bars in the region.

At the Comedy Caravan, patrons enjoy a chance to unwind with some good, clean fun — comedy.

More Than a Concert

RIGHT: Tim Basham with his tickets waiting outside Lexington's Rupp Arena gives the sign language "U2".

They stood in the cold, dark night and endured the rain for one reason; to see the hottest band touring the United States.

Many University students, along with local high school students, spent a night camped out in front of the University Book & Supply on the Eastern By-Pass to buy tickets for the Irish rock band, U2, concert in Lexington's Rupp Arena.

For the next three weeks the most frequently asked question on campus was "Ya got tickets for the U2 concert?"

Tim Basham, a senior from Stearns, said waiting all night to get upper-arena tickets for the Oct. 23 show was definitely worth the wait.

"How often do you get to see U2?" he said.

Waiting in front of UBS, students passed the time by tossing football and playing baseball in the parking lot. An occasional drift of beer and marijuana lingered in the air as people passed the time.

Basham said camping out was an experience. "It was like watching the evolution of a day," he said.

The sold-out show was worth the wait as U2 performed for nearly one-and-a-half hours and kept the audience on its feet for most of the show.

"He really got everybody involved, said Basham, referring to how U2's lead singer Bono kept the energy of the concert at such a high level.

The band played most of the new material from its top selling album "The Joshua Tree" while mixing popular songs from previous albums. The performance also featured cover songs of Bob Dylan, The Beatles and a moving rendition of Rod Stewart's "People Get Ready." Bono picked a member of the audience to play the guitar during the song.

"It was like a spiritual experience," Basham said referring to the band. "I'd go see 'em again."

University Hosts

The 1987 governor's race came to campus this fall with Democrat Wallace Wilkinson and Republican John Harper going head-to-head at their final debate in the Perkins Building.

Harper used the debate to ask Wilkinson one last time about his personal worth.

The Lexington businessman reported a sum of $1.3 million as his income after taxes for 1986.

After the debate, Harper voiced his displeasure with the information, saying Wilkinson owed the state more information.

"I'm not satisfied," Harper said. "A simple statement of what I had and of what I paid is something you tell a first grader."

The hour-long debate, spon-

sored by the League of Women Voters, was broadcast live by Kentucky Educational Television (KET) and WKYT-TV of Lexington from the University's television studios.

Election campaign expenditures and election fraud were also discussed. Wilkinson financed most of his campaign out of personal funds and both candidates voiced concern over vote-buying in the state.

Wilkinson and Harper agreed that steps should be taken to ensure an honest and fair election — free of vote-buying.

Both said they would ask Gov. Martha Layne Collins to post state troopers at the polls.

When asked about consolidating some of the state's poorer counties, both candidates said there was no chance.

Harper said Wilkinson represented the old way of politics in Kentucky, not the change Wilkinson had promised.

Wilkinson's key promise to the state was a lottery.

"The people of Kentucky are beginning to learn that you've tagged the lottery as a do-all," Harper said.

Wilkinson said he had presented his plans for change in Kentucky, and he challenged Harper to do the same.

Both candidates disclosed confidence in the outcome of the debate afterwards.

"The best poll's two weeks from now," Harper said.

"I think we delivered our message again," Wilkinson said.

University Experiences Physical Transition

Students returned to the University this fall to find many physical changes both completed and underway.

The grill, on the ground floor of the Powell Building, was completely renovated. The color scheme and furnishings were changed and the food service menu was expanded.

The first football game was also unusual in that kickoff was at 7:30 p.m. The first night game was a big event on campus this year. The lights were installed as part of the Begley Building renovations.

Even the sidewalks linking the campus have been dressed up. The University seal was laid in new concrete in front of the Keen Johnson Building. Initials were designed in the walkways around the University and many of the dormitory lobbies have been redecorated as well as newly furnished.

The new lobby decor features coordinating furniture, carpet, and blinds.

New landscaping facing the Eastern By-Pass behind the baseball field, spells out "EKU" in shrubbery.

According to Dr. Doug Whitlock executive assistant to the president, the funding for the improvements came from a variety of sources.

A state bond issue was the largest source. It included monies designated by the state for improvements to the Begley Building and major renovations in the academic buildings.

Whitlock added that "auxiliary enterprises allowed for some renovations such as the grill."

The landscaping changes were made possible by private money set aside for that purpose in a will, according to Whitlock.

Number of Non-Traditional Students Increases

College students are usually thought of as being 18 to 22-years old, straight out of high school, and all the stereotypical characteristics that go along with those circumstances.

Colleges and universities across the country are experiencing a change in the number of students that fit the traditional description. The University is seeing this trend also.

According to Les Grigsby, director of admissions, there are approximately 2,000 students over the age of 25 enrolled at the University. There has been an "increase of 300 non-traditional students in one year alone", added Grigsby.

These adults are returning to or enrolling in college for many different reasons.

Teresa Duffee returned to complete her education after ten years. She is a Spanish teaching major with three children at home. Duffee said she returned to complete her training because she has always wanted to be a teacher and got interested in Spanish while living in Central America.

It is often not a choice to return to school but a necessity. Jim Adams returned to school because his career demanded it. He is working on an English degree as preparation for entering the theological seminary.

Making the decision to return to college is the easiest step. Duffee said she felt that the most difficult aspect was "getting back in the routine of studying. A family makes it difficult sometimes."

Adams also expressed the difficulty of balancing college with a family. "My obligations at home take away one whole aspect of the college experience," he said.

There is no doubt it is difficult but both students feel they have made the right choice. Duffee said she has sacrificed a lot because she is paying for it this time.

The more seasoned students look at fellow coeds in a different light than may be expected. Traditional students are applying themselves and taking school more seriously Duffee said. Adams added that non-traditional students appreciate it more than younger adults.

Both Duffee and Adams said they felt students should make every effort to complete their education while they are young.

Adams said "I would rather be 20-years-old and have a degree I never use than to be 31 and need it."

University Shapes Up

There was a time when Twinkies and potato chips lined students' cabinets.

Now yogurt and granola bars sit beside the junk food.

Students are becoming more health conscious.

And it is not only the men that are seen pumping iron and running laps. Women are overcoming their fear of sweat and are battling the bulge, too.

There are numerous ways of doing it, but students are working hard toward the common goal of beautiful minds and bodies.

University facilities are open to students whether they choose to swim, run, lift weights, jazzercise, or any other form of physical activity.

A world reknown cardiologist summed up the current mood by saying, "Fitness is not only exercise; it is play and sport and joy. It is the desire to perfect oneself."

Students are becoming more educated about health.

Aerobic activity, including walking, jogging and swimming, has been proven to not only firm figures and trim fat, but also helps to keep blood pressure down, relieve hypertension, stress, anxiety and increase longevity.

EKU Theatre Presents

"Feed Meee!", "Feed Meee!", Audrey II, the man-eating plant exclaims.

His faithful keeper, Seymour, stumbles over and squeezes a couple more drops of blood out of his finger into the mouth of the demanding plant.

Audrey II and Seymour were only a part of the cast that made the EKC production of "Little Shop of Horrors" a huge success.

Seymour, a humbling, typical nerd, was played by Jerry Mellyvain. Chip Dorton supplied a voice to jive-talking plant with a nack for manipulating Seymour.

However, Seymour's main weakness is the Audrey he named the plant for, Audrey, a brave battered blonde who works beside Seymour in Mushnik's Flower Shop on Skid Row, was played by Erika Miller.

Seymour's longing to take her far away from the hole-in-the-wall shop and her brutalizing boyfriend leads him to commit two heinous acts of murder — to feed the plant.

The unusual plant begins to draw attention to the shop catapulting Seymour to instant fame as its creator. But no one really knows that the plant is from outer space and would like to eat many large U.S. cities.

The gruesome plot is lightened considerably by the singing talents of Crystal, Ronnette and Chiffon, played by Alicia Lynette Booker, Lassie LaRue and Sheryl Edelen respectively.

They pop up at surprising times to belt out a tune that fits the plot perfectly.

When Seymour can take no more of Audrey's dentist boyfriend abusing her, he decides the creep looks like great plant food.

And of course when Mushnik gets curious about blood stains on the floor, he also falls prey to the manipulative plant.

But when the plant, which is six feet tall at this point, gets out of control and kills Seymour's beloved Audrey, his life is over and he too is eventually eaten by the plant.

To wrap up the performance the entire cast popped out along with giant green vines falling from the rafters to sing the warning "don't feed the plant."

Christmas Traditions

Christmas. The holiday season is a time for tradition. Whether it be caroling with friends and family, egg nog at Grandma's, or simply trimming the tree, each family has its traditions of the season. So does the University community.

The December 6 Hanging of the Greens in Keen Johnson's Walnut Hall marked the 58th annual observance of the oldest continuous University ceremony. Over one hundred students took part in the festivities based on the old English tradition of decking the halls with greenery.

The Brock Auditorium was the site of the 53rd performance of Handel's "Messiah." The University Singers and Concert Choir, accompanied by the Symphony Orchestra, provided 125 student musicians an opportunity to participate.

The traditional spirit of the holidays is most often reflected in the students. Everyone cannot wait to get home to friends and family. Christmas lights and miniature trees decorate dormitory windows while an occasional Christmas carol replaces the top 40 music on the radio.

Microwaved hot chocolate and commercial Christmas cookies are the closest thing to a holiday feast.

Finals week adds new meaning to the Christmas spirit.

For many, Santa, mistletoe, and gifts take a temporary back seat to the stress of a rigorous test schedule.

Christmas to some is the unbelievable anticipation of getting home for the holidays. To others, the season is a beacon to the end of another semester.

Regardless of what the holidays mean to the individual, within one's academic life the rich traditions of both the University and the season make the few weeks prior to Christmas a very special time on campus.

Grill Gets a New Look

OPPOSITE: This student uses his lunch break to catch up on reading. BELOW: The raised platforms add to the grill's light atmosphere. RIGHT: The newly remodeled grill is not only a place to eat but can be a study area or a spot to relax.

A baked potato and salad bar, an expanded deli, and a light atmosphere combined to make the $190,000 grill expansion successful.

Originally the renovation plans called for remodeling of the serving area only. "Apparently we came through with such reasonable cost estimates on those changes that the president decided we ought to go ahead and do the dining area," said food service director and renovation co-ordinator Greg Hopkins.

In addition to the expanded menu the grill's atmosphere has improved. It was designed by a combination of ideas from a University interior design class.

The color scheme is mauve and white. Hopkins said he liked the combination because it is popular now and it was close to our traditional maroon. The new design also features raised platforms, one with a 40" stereo television, and a bar along the windows.

The grill's classy new appearance is complemented by its menu variety. The grill now offers a 16-flavor ice cream and frozen yogurt shop, a bakery, a gourmet coffee shop, and a pizzeria.

The students have welcomed the improvements with a 59 percent increase in business. The grill also serves its customers 60 percent more efficiently.

The lighter, more pleasant atmosphere has provided the students with a nice place to eat and a relaxed study area and socializing spot.

Be My Valentine

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways and let me count them on the day for lovers, Valentine's Day.

There's a holiday for everyone, especially for the die hard romantics at the University. Valentine's Day is the perfect time to show that special someone how much they really care.

sions, decisions, "Would he like this better than that? She said she was on a diet so candy is out. What do I do now?!"

According to two University students, no matter how frantic the search seems to get, in the end things have a way of falling into place, and the gifts are perfect.

"I had an impossible time

Tinsley said, "He chose the place because I'm not familiar with Lexington and didn't know any good places to eat."

After deciding on the restaurant, Tinsley and valentine Chuck Jody, senior graphic arts major from Corbin, drove to Lexington, but got a little lost on the way to dinner.

"I decided to go to TGI Fridays," said Jody, "but I forgot where it was, passed by it twice, and we went to Max and Erma's instead."

Tinsley said things ran much smoother after arriving at Max and Erma's.

"He was happy. He said it was a sweet thing for me to do. We had a great time," said Tinsley. "I just hope we're together next Valentine's Day."

"It was very thoughtful," Jody said.

Jody said his Valentine's Day gift decision also took some time.

"I knew for a couple of weeks what I wanted to get her, either a stuffed animal or flowers," said Jody. "Since they both cost about the same, I decided to get the stuffed animal instead of the flowers, because she could keep the stuffed animal forever."

Flowers, cards, and candy were delivered to every dorm on campus with a special question, "Would you be my valentine?" sent along with them.

For some students the quest to find the perfect gift for their valentine was a much harder task than finding the valentine.

A gift must be bought, decifinding the right gift," said Tracy Tinsley, freshman physical education major from Rochester, N.Y. "I thought about flowers. I went to Hallmark. I went to a balloon store."

"I didn't know what he liked or wanted, so I took him out to dinner," said Tinsley. "My roommate came up with the idea."

GOLD

Diamonds might be a girl's best friend, but gold is a student's lifelong keepsake.

Whether a graduation gift or a token from a good friend, gold is forever.

Gold jewelry is one fashion accent that never goes out of style.

Although the price of gold fluctuates, many students invest in rings, bracelets, earrings, chains and watches.

Students wear gold with everything from blue jeans and sweat shirts to dresses and tailored suits.

Layers of gold chains with various charms and multiple earrings are also a fashion trend.

Because gold is an investment and also a good gift students enjoy displaying their collections for all to see.

Much of the gold jewelry worn today is unisex because it is appealing to both men and women.

Students even personalize their gold by wearing Greek letters, their initials and their names engraved or carved in the precious alloy.

Another allure of gold is its versatility.

The conservative person can wear one gold chain and some small earring and look stylish while the more daring person might wear large dangling gold earrings, a gold belt and numerous gold chains and rings.

Any student walking in downtown Richmond has seen them. Small groups of older men huddled beside the courthouse walls to escape the wind, or on sunnier summer days, lounging in the shade on the courthouse lawn.

They sit on folding aluminum and wooden lawn chairs, with hats in their laps and smiles on their faces. Or they stand, leaning on canes swaying and gesturing with the conversation.

These men are universal fixtures of small town America, a common sight around courthouses, city halls, and county seats nationwide.

Practitioners of the fading art of conversation, Richmond's main street philosophers enact a daily practice that dates back to a time before mass media and the instant exchange of information removed a portion of color from our lives.

Those men who gather around the square downtown are vestiges of a time when a trip to town filled an entire day. Traveling into town meant meeting neighbors rarely seen, and a time to trade produce, crop tips, humor, and local news. Talking to a neighbor was a release from the daily rural routine.

Restrained and formal with outsiders, they are more relaxed with their elite circle, friends they have known for years.

Invisible to most younger people who rush from place to place, they silently observe first street as the faces change from year to year.

Long after memories of academic life have faded, there is security in the knowledge that for each new face on campus, there will be a small, quiet cluster of men downtown that will take note of their passing and continue their routine of discussing the important things: The weather, the community and the people of Madison County.

GINZBERG ENCOURAGES KINDNESS AND CHARITY

Soviet dissident Alexander Ginzberg came to Eastern Oct. 14 as part of the Center Board lecture series.

His message to American college students: "The Soviet Union is an empire of evil, but it is peopled by human beings."

Ginzberg was born in Moscow and has been active in the Soviet Union human rights movement since its beginning. He has spent a total of 15 years in Soviet labor camps as punishment for his human rights activities.

Ginzberg, who is often asked to talk about human rights in the Soviet Union, replies.

"That is difficult . . . there is nothing to say." He recalled the paradox of the flags in the Russian Revolution, which supposedly symbolized human rights. In reality, he said, these do not exist.

The audience listened intently to stories of Soviets instilling fear in people to prevent their resistance. Ginzberg said the first targets are people connected with religion. A group of Soviet repression is intellectuals and culturally active individuals.

Ginzberg told of his early involvement in the Russian human rights movement. After studying journalism at the University of Moscow, he worked in the Soviet press. His unhappiness with severe editing and censorship left him two choices. "I could drop my profession or become a cynic." "I am still a journalist," he confidently stated.

This discontentment led to his fight for human rights.

Ginsberg reflected on his years in the Soviet Union and praised groups such as Amnesty International for helping him to escape to the West.

Ginzberg addressed the plight of Soviet Jews by saying that the strong organization of American Jews could help them improve their lives.

Sneaky Creatures

Cute, cuddly, and very rarely talking back, pets are sometimes a college student's best friend.

Even though having pets in the dorm rooms is against University policy, these furry, scaly, feathery critters seem to find their way on campus.

The student owners seem to have no problem bringing their pets into the dorms.

The owner of Hammy, a teddy bear hamster, said, "I just carried him in his aquarium and we took the elevator upstairs."

Hammy is still adjusting to dorm life, since he's a new arrival at the University.

Hammy is handling the transition well, but his owner isn't. "I can't get any sleep because Hammy rides his little wire wheel all night," said Hammy's owner. "I take his wheel out of his cage now."

Sid Viscious, the tarantula, represents all the eight legged University residents.

Sid's a veteran of campus life, being a member of the University community for approximately three months.

Being quite the celebrity, his owner says Sid is known throughout the dorm.

"People come in and are more or less amazed by Sid," said his owner.

Besides Sid's celebrity status, he seems to practice magic on the side.

"I got up one morning and he wasn't in his cage," said Sid's owner. "I immediately told my roommate that Sid wasn't in the cage. Needless to say, he came out of the bed."

other dorm floor is Rocky the parrot.

Rocky's the eternal colonel in our critter crew being a University resident for six months.

"Everybody likes to play with Rocky," said his owner. "Sometimes when I come in he's not here because people take him out and play with him."

Although Rocky is just one of the guys on his floor, he goes in the closet during room inspection.

Lee Greenwood Moves University Audience

It's 6:30 p.m. The crowd, 100 strong and casually dressed, had already assembled outside the doors of Brock Auditorium. But, the concert did not begin until 8 p.m.

"He's going to melt some hearts tonight," an anxious fan said.

Behind the building, about 15 fans waited to catch a look at the 46-year-old country star.

Within 10 minutes, Lee Greenwood arrived. A short, trim man with dark thinning hair, Greenwood seemed very self-assured in his casual attire.

"People come to my concerts expecting to be moved," Greenwood said. "They go away entertained."

He plays piano, guitar, bass, banjo and saxophone. A songwriter as well as a musician, Greenwood composed the song "One in a Million You," for Kenny Rogers which went to number one on the country charts worldwide.

"The next time you hear it on the radio, remember, he didn't write it," Greenwood joked.

Greenwood writes many of the songs he sings. "It's a creative process, just like sculpting or painting," he said.

He said he is inspired by his surroundings. His touring van, which he calls his home away from home, complete with Pound Puppy, was the inspiration for the song "Home Away From Home" on his debut album, "Inside Out."

As for his fan mail, Greenwood said he gets a lot and admitted that it "makes me feel wanted and builds my confidence as a performer."

Most of his fan mail comes from a college-aged audience. "They're a crowd who's excited to be there," he said.

Appealing Crates

About every other college dorm room has them.

They come in assorted colors. They are square. They have handles. Some of them are stolen. Some of them are bought. They are plastic milk crates.

Students use them for everything from propping up television sets to housing text books to holding cassette tapes.

Most students consider the lightweight, durable, versatile boxes irreplaceable—but so do the milk companies.

Millions of dollars worth of the crates are stolen each year across the country.

Management at the Winn Dixie grocery store in Richmond said the crates disappear frequently from behind the store on the Eastern By-pass.

The U.S. dairy industry feels as though it is being penalized for designing the perfect box.

But most people don't consider taking the crates as theft.

After all, they are left sitting behind stores. When people move they take boxes from grocery stores. Why not milk crates?

A spokesman for the world's largest manufacturer of the crates said the company has done everything possible to make them unappealing.

They have made the cases in yellow with purple swirls hoping the ugly combination would deter theft.

Other manufacturers have attempted to copy the boxes and sell them in retail stores.

Newer, bolder and brighter colors don't seem to beat the excitement of piling six students into a Volkswagen and heading to the grocery store for a milk crate raid.

Classes can be tough enough without having to struggle to get to them.

Transportation on campus, whether to class, downtown, or home for the weekend comes in varied shapes and styles.

Skateboards, once a staple of California culture, have emerged on campus as a preferred mode of travel for some.

Curbs and steps are nothing to the more intrepid boarders, as they jump, flip, and do handstands across the sidewalks and streets of the campus.

A more conventional mode of transportation is the bicycle. Requiring less ability than a board with four wheels, this two-wheeled wonder can be seen coasting through parking lots and rolling up to classrooms.

One-wheeled wonders, unicycles, have occasionally been seen, but their numbers are definitely low. As for as an economical method of travel goes, the unicycle is hard to beat. One seat, one wheel, and you're off!

The greatest means of transportation on campus is also the cause of one of the university's greatest problems. Cars on campus fill every available parking spot, resulting in a multitude of parking tickets for the unwary, and, for the most unfortunate, an empty space where their recently towed car had been parked.

AIDS: CHANGING SEXUALITY

The students of this decade are faced with an unprecedented issue. It is silent; it is deadly; and it is dangerously misunderstood. It is AIDS.

College campuses have long been fertile ground on which to cultivate controversy. The nation's college students are often the first to recognize an issue and to confront it. These young adults and their institutions are monitored as the pulse point of a nation and the lifeline of a generation.

Every generation has had its issue. From the cold war, to the Vietnam experience, to the flower child movement, colleges and university communities have faced and solved issues and obstacles that rose before them.

The unique position of the college student makes him or her a prime target for the eighties epidemic. In the years of suspension between adolescence and adulthood, these young people are making the choices of an adult often with the information and sometimes with the nonchalance of a child. These actions could make the pulse point of a nation a silent monitor.

The experts say everytime you have sex with someone you are sleeping with every partner they have ever had. What does this mean to a spring break fling or a one-night stand met in a bar? It means what was once acceptable to many students has the power to eliminate a generation.

College is a time to grow, to change, and to experience. For many, sexual relationships are a big part of this experience. It is the last years of innocence and the first of responsibility; somewhere between the backseat at the drive-in and a monogamous relationship. This facet of the college experience is quickly changing.

Eastern students, like their national contemporaries, are changing their habits. The AIDS question remains in the back of the mind of students. The fear of the consequences of casual sex has started a trend toward monogamous relationships, as well as abstinence by choice among students. These alternatives provide a feeling of safety from AIDS as well as other sexually-transmitted diseases.

These trends are encouraging but there are always those who are willing to play the odds. Homosexual males, prostitutes, and IV drug users are the major target groups for the deadly virus.

"It won't happen to me; I only go home with people I know," is a commonly held belief among college students who don't consider themselves as belonging in any of those categories.

It is our future, our lives, our decisions, and our responsibility. There are always going to be one-night stands, and casual sex is hardly a thing of the past. But there is also always going to be that threat of AIDS looming over like a dark cloud dimming the romantic moonlight.

Students Rally For Higher Education

When Gov. Wallace Wilkinson released his Higher Education Budget proposal, he had no idea he was going to get marched all over.

He wasn't literally marched on, but the capitol in Frankfort was.

On Feb. 16, college students from all across the state came together to voice their opinion on Wilkinson's Higher Education proposals.

The occasion was heralded as "a celebration of higher education."

The day started with a march up Capitol Avenue to the steps of the capitol building. Student protesters waved posters in opposition to Wilkinson's educational package.

It was on the steps where student listened to the opinions of all the state university student senate leaders.

Gov. Wilkinson said after meeting with student senate presidents that he "agreed with everything they said."

However, he said he didn't agree with raising taxes to support needed university planning.

After the march had peacefully subsided, Wilkinson joined senate presidents in going to the higher education rally that was held at Frankfort's Dungeon Civic Center.

It was at the Civic Center that the students witnessed a multitude of entertainment.

Each participating school had some sort of part in making the whole rally a success.

Three thousand onlookers were entertained by the university show choir for 15 minutes of pulsating vocalism.

At the end of the rally, all could feel a sense of accomplishment. Everyone played their part and Higher Education had taken its stand.

Gov. Wilkinson for one day could not ignore the message of an estimated 6,000 marchers and 3,000 rally attendants.

The university had the largest estimated crowd attendance with well over 400 students on hand.

President Seeks To Improve University

The University's eighth president, Dr. Hanly Funderburk, spent much of the academic year working "to make a good university a better university."

Communication with key constituency groups has been key to the process, he said.

"We have worked hard to get people involved with the University, including students and their parents, faculty, staff, alumni and other friends," Dr. Funderburk said. "We've also worked hard to improve our communication with each of these constituency groups."

On campus, Dr. Funderburk and his staff worked with student leaders to maintain open channels of communications, with special emphasis on responding to students' needs. Faculty and staff members were encouraged to participate in the University's planning process, which used to determine priorities in the University's future direction.

Dr. Funderburk gave special attention to University graduates, devoting considerable time and energy to reestablishing alumni chapters throughout Kentucky. Efforts to get alumni back on campus and involved with their Alma Mater, particularly through membership on academic program advisory boards, also received presidential attention.

The President also was instrumental in recruiting members for the expanded EKV Foundation Board of Directors, which now includes 13 business and community leaders.

"These individuals have distinguished themselves in the business world and beyond and their leadership will enhance Eastern's ability to acquire additional financial resources from the private sector," he said.

State funding for the University remained one of the most crucial issues President Funderburk faced during the school year. Along with his closest advisers, Dr. Funderburk spent many hours at the state capitol in Frankfort, discussing the University's needs with legislators and members of the governor's staff.

This message was also repeated to the more than 250 members of the EKV Legislative Network, an organization composed of Eastern graduates and other friends who helped communicate University needs to elected members of the Kentucky General Assembly.

"Eastern has been a school of opportunity for thousands of Kentuckians, and it is our desire for this University to continue to provide quality educational opportunities for all Kentuckians," he said. "First and foremost, we are a teaching institution, but we shall continue to share our resources with our service region and the Commonwealth of Kentucky through our public service programs."

Vice Presidents and Board of Regents

The EKU Board of Regents is the official policy making and statutory governing body of the University.

The board was faced with a variety of issues during the academic year.

In July, the ten-member governing board approved a $1.1 million reduction in the University's 1987-88 budget, which has made necessary by a revenue shortfall in the state.

However, more than 50 campus improvement projects continued, which were the result of funding from revenue bonds issued by the regents in 1986-87 or from nonrecurring institutional funds.

The board also approved a new academic honors program for academically talented students which will be implemented during the 1988 fall semester. The four-year program will feature a series of honors seminars within the University's general education program. Completion of the program will entitle students to graduate as "Honors Scholars."

In January, the regents voted unanimously to extend the contract of President Funderburk through June 30, 1993.

Board Members cited Dr.

Funderburk's excellent leadership in approving the four-year extension.

Three new members joined the board during the academic year. Burl Spurlock of Prestonsburg, Gary Gillis of Versailles, and John Cooper of Lexington replaced former regents John M. Keith of Cynthia, Robert Warren of Lexington, and Tom Harper of Richmond, whose terms expired.

David Nusz of Lexington, the president of the EKU Student Association, serves as student regent.

The University administration is coordinated and unified by five vice presidents. While each vice president is responsible for different areas, a common thread runs through all of the jobs—the ultimate goal of making a good university even better.

The vice president for Student Affairs coordinates student life, student services, student development, financial aid, and health and counseling services. Dr. Thomas Myers is the vice president in this area.

The Robert R. Martin Years

President Emeritus Robert R. Martin had a vision of greatness for the University.

He used those words to chart the University's course from 1960 when he gave his inaugural address.

A native of Lincoln County, Martin served as president for 16 years with pride, fervor and big dreams for what the University could become.

In his report of his first 15 years' tenure, Martin looked toward the future with these words:

"Today, Eastern Kentucky University stands as a multi-purpose, regional university bearing little resemblance to the Eastern Kentucky State College of 1960. A majority of our students are enrolled in majors that were not available on the campus 15 years ago.

Thirty percent of our total enrollment is in two new "practical areas" -- allied health and law enforcement begun after 1965.

Some 1,863 students are enrolled in non-traditional, two-year associate degree programs, reflecting the university's responsiveness and determination to serve in unique and needed ways."

The University began a growing process during the Martin years which transformed it into the fine institution it is today.

Retrospect reveals that the 65-year-old was an accurate prophet of Eastern's future.

Martin left a distinct impression upon the university which is evident in both internal and external changes.

The J. C. Powell Years

1977-1983

J.C. Powell faithfully served the University for 24 years.

From 1977 to 1984 he served as president, urging the building of strength in programs and implementing a formal planning program.

"How will we remember the administration of this soft-spoken man, with his dry sense of humor, who for more than eight years was charged with leading one of the nation's most highly respected regional universities?" asked Dr. John D. Rowlett, University vice-president for academic affairs and research.

"We will remember J.C. Powell for his skillful and cool-headed guidance of the institution through a period of years when we were buffeted by double-digit inflation, experienced what seemed to be an endless series of budget reductions, and saw state appropriations lag behind our demonstrable needs," said Rowlett.

Besides improving the quality of programs, Powell encouraged the recruitment of superior students through the Foundation Scholars Program.

Powell said he'd noticed a beneficial change in students in the 80's. He said students are more concerned about what they are learning.

J.C. Powell successfully upheld the traditions of the University while also allowing changes to occur for the betterment of the student body.

Whitlock Plays “Generalist” Role

“I have been fortunate enough to work for two fine men,” said Dr. Doug Whitlock, concerning his connections with the office of the University president.

Whitlock is the executive assistant to President Funderburk. In addition to assisting the president, he is responsible for overseeing the Division of Public Safety. He calls himself a “generalist” since his position includes a wide range of tasks and cannot follow a strict job description.

Whitlock said his responsibilities are wide open and his job covers all aspects of running the University. “I try to help people from all areas—from budget and finance to academics,” he said.

Whitlock did his undergraduate and graduate work here at the University. After discharge from the U. S. Army in 1968, he served Eastern as director of publications and Division of Public Information before becoming Dr. J. C. Powell’s executive assistant.

Working with people is a favorite part of Dr. Whitlock’s job. His most rewarding experiences are “watching the success of scholarship recipients.”

Whitlock is chairman of the scholarship committee, a position which allows him to follow recipients’ progress during their years at Eastern and after graduation.

Dr. Whitlock is an advocate of liberal arts education, with a diverse background of his own. He has studied history and journalism and now teaches introductory as well as advanced basic computer programming. Whitlock said he tries to teach at least three hours per semester because “teaching keeps me connected with the students.”

Dean David Gale

Anne Secrest
Outstanding Student

David Gale continues his quest for quality in his fifteenth year as Dean of the College of Allied Health and Nursing. Like others in the University's academic community, he recognizes and promotes the "overriding emphasis on quality of instruction."

Six programs in this college are up for re-accreditation and Dean Gale intends for those programs to be re-accredited with outstanding success.

As a result of Dean Gale priorities, his college boasts of high quality health field graduates that are in high demand locally and regionally.

Occupational therapy major Anne Secrest was chosen as the Outstanding Student from the College of Allied Health and Nursing.

Secrest maintained a 3.38 GPA while serving as Panhellenic vice president through her membership in Kappa Delta sorority.

She has participated in several fund-raising projects for the March of Dimes and Crippled Children's Hospital. Secrest, a 1987 Homecoming finalist, was also nominated for Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Secrest is the recipient of many Greek honors and awards, including Kappa Delta Scholarship and Greek Leader-of-the-Month.

Selecting a University with a solid program in occupational therapy is a major concern for Secrest. However, she says she hopes to have a family and be as successful as her parents have been.

College Of Allied Health and Nursing

Dean Kenneth Hansson

Kenneth Hansson entered his thirteenth year as Dean of the College of Applied Arts and Technology. He feels the general education options in this college are necessary for students to get a broad technical background in any field of study.

The specialization offered is also important. He boasts, "We have an excellent faculty," and they are exceptionally "willing and able to help students in accomplishing their goals." He enjoys giving the students a chance to apply themselves and adds that the faculty is very supportive of this.

Mark Landon Smith was named Outstanding Student from the College of Applied Arts and Technology. Smith, a broadcasting major, had an overall GPA of 3.9.

He served as a Lambda Chi Alpha member as well as a member of Mortar Board, Kappa Tau Alpha, and Student Senate.

Smith was chosen president of Alpha Epsilon Rho and was included on the Dean's List every semester. He has received the Lexington Board of Realtors, University Foundation and Lexington Junior Achievement scholarships.

"I plan to seek a job in the news field of television or radio," said Smith. Eventually he would like to continue his education in the media area.

Mark Landon Smith
Outstanding Student

John Long

John Long of the College of Arts and Humanities served his ninth year as Dean. When asked what he liked best about the University he replied, "The wide range of opportunities and extra-curricular events that are provided." He is proud of the national and regional recognition that the various programs in his college receive.

Dean Long's latest project is Friends of Fine Arts, a group of supporters of the fine arts. He hopes this organization continues to grow. He also hopes to make a major contribution to the honors program the University plans to establish.

Jeff Perkins
Outstanding Student

The Outstanding Student in the College of Arts and Humanities is Jeff Perkins, who had a GPA of 3.8.

The English teaching major has been active in the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and Interfraternity Council. He also served as resident assistant in Palmer Hall.

Perkins served as SAE president and attended the fraternity's national convention, where he was honored as parliamentarian.

Perkins, a Phillip Mankin English Scholarship winner has been included in the Dean's List and was also the recipient of the Interfraternity Council scholarship.

Perkins says he looks forward to his future with confidence gained during his undergraduate career at the University.

College Of Arts and Humanities

The 1987-88 academic year is the second year for Dr. Charles Falk as dean of the College of Business. Upon coming to the University, Dr. Falk was most impressed with the "positive attitude of the faculty toward the students and the faculty's dedication to the task." He is proud of the caring factor he sees between the students and faculty of his college.

Dr. Falk has set several goals for himself. He wants to fill the college's teaching vacancies with the most capable and qualified people in order to further promote the good reputation of his college. Dr. Falk also wants to increase the stock of microcomputers by raising additional private funds.

The College of Business chose Carol Durham, an accounting major, as its Outstanding Student.

Durham was involved in Kappa Delta Tau, a service sorority, the Accounting Club, intramural softball and volleyball while maintaining her 3.9 GPA.

She also served as treasurer of Lambda Sigma, the sophomore honor society, and vice president of Sigma Tau Pi, the business honorary.

Durham was a nominee for the Truman Scholarship her sophomore year. She received the R.R. Richards Scholarship Award and the ECU Women's Scholarship.

Durham's goal is to become a CPA and eventually to secure a partnership in an international accounting firm.

Dean Charles Falk

Carol Durham
Outstanding Student

Dean Dixon Barr

Dixon Barr has served as dean of the College of Education for 23 years. The college has had an excellent reputation for producing quality teachers for equally as long.

Barr's love for the University helps him do his job. He is fond of the beautiful campus, the dedicated faculty, and the interesting students. His college has an unique asset—Model Laboratory School. Students can directly experience quality teaching either by observing or by participating.

Barr constantly develops and strengthens his program. Increasing computer literacy among teaching students is one of his main goals.

Pamela Woltenberg
Outstanding Student

Pamela Sue Woltenberg, a 3.85 G.P.A. elementary education major, was chosen by the College of Education as its Outstanding Student.

Woltenberg has been included on the Dean's List and was a Presidential Scholar Athlete Award Winner. She is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta and participated in intercollegiate swimming.

Through her Greek involvement, Woltenberg has been active in many community projects such as Telford Community Center work and the Special Olympics.

She has worked as a swimming instructor and also coached swim teams.

She plans to teach in the Cincinnati area while pursuing a master's and doctoral degree. She said she would like to "work with talented and gifted children in the counseling field."

College Of Education

College Of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics

Dean Robert Baugh

The three departments in the College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics prepare the students to promote better health in society. Robert Baugh has served as acting dean of the college since February, 1987.

When asked what he liked best about the University, he said, "the campus beautiful. I enjoy the atmosphere and the surroundings."

His personal goal is, "learn to practice what I preach, I need to have a better lifestyle and learn to relax."

As for his professional goals, Dean Baugh said that he would like to do the best job possible as dean. He wants to be the best leader and motivator.

The Outstanding Student from the College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Athletics is Mitsue Alice York.

The physical education major maintained a 3.91 GPA while being involved in Lambda Sigma, Mortar Board, and Kappa Delta Tau. York was also active in Women's Softball, Air Force ROTC, and the University Trainer's Club.

York was first runner-up to the 1986 Homecoming Queen.

Following completion of her pre-physical therapy curriculum and completion of her bachelor's degree in physical education, York plans to continue her education.

York said she hopes "to project a Christian example" throughout her future endeavors.

Dean Truett Ricks

Adrienne Cole
Outstanding Student

With a wide range of employment opportunities after graduating, the College of Law Enforcement provides students with the best education possible in law enforcement.

According to Dr. Truett Ricks, dean of the college since June, 1983, "We strive for quality programming, recruitment, student placement and faculty".

Dean Ricks said the best thing about the University is, "the freedom to do your job."

His personal goals are to attend more workshops and learn more about the courses taught in the graduate program.

His professional goals are to improve the opportunity for the faculty and to improve the job placement services for the students. Dean Ricks also said he would like to finish a text on security-law prevention that he is co-authoring.

Adrienne Cole, a psychology and police administration double major, was chosen as the Outstanding Student in the College of Law Enforcement.

While maintaining a 3.8 GPA, she participated in the Association of Law Enforcement, Student Alumni Association, Barrister's Club and the Psychology Club.

She also served as the secretary of Psi Chi, the psychology honorary, historian of Mortar Board, a senior honor society, and secretary of Alpha Phi Sigma, the criminal justice honorary.

She was the outstanding junior in the Department of Police Administration and was a Foundation/Regents Scholar.

After graduating from Eastern, she plans to enter law school at the University of Louisville. She then hopes to obtain a position with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

College Of Law Enforcement

College Of Natural and Mathematical Sciences

Dean Donald Batch

As Donald Batch approaches a decade of service as dean of the College of Natural and Mathematical Sciences, he is most impressed with the faculty's associations and interactions with the students.

Dean Batch proudly points out the impressive "scholarly activities and service efforts" of the faculty of his college.

His major projects were the acquisition of funds for the purchase of new and replacement of old equipment and the seeking of additional space for the college.

Louis Paul Oligee, a physics major with a 3.66 GPA, was chosen the Outstanding Student of the College of Natural and Mathematical Sciences.

He participated in Mortar Board, the senior honor society, Kappa Mu Epsilon, the math honorary, and Gamma Beta Phi, an academic honorary. He has also been a part-time staff member as an undergraduate lab assistant in the Department of Physics and Astronomy.

He served as president of the Physics Club and of Sigma Pi Sigma, the physics honorary. He was included in the National Dean's List from 1985 to 1987 and was chosen as the Outstanding Student on Elementary Physics.

Oligee plans to attend graduate school and major in Aeronautical Engineering.

Paul Oligee
Outstanding Student

Dean Vance Wisenbaker

Vance Wisenbaker has been dean of the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences for one year. He is constantly trying to upgrade the quality of the programs in his college. He sees the quality of the faculty as the college's best asset.

Wisenbaker is working to establish a child and family clinic for the Department of Psychology. The clinic will allow graduate psychology students to get practical experience in handling family problems.

Another of Wisenbaker's goals is to expand the Institute of Government, which is a service and research facility. Dean Wisenbaker also wants to expand the stock of microcomputers in the department of government, anthropology, sociology, and social work.

Anthropology major Beverly Ellen Strange was chosen by the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences as its outstanding student.

The Alpha Gamma Delta member has achieved a 3.9 GPA and has been involved in many student activities. Ellen was a Foundation scholar and member of Phi Kappa Phi.

A National Dean's List scholar, Strange has been a resident assistant in Case Hall and served in the Student Senate. During her junior year she was a Panhellenic delegate.

Strange hopes to continue her education and earn a graduate degree.

MILESTONE Hall of Fame

Mark Smith is the Milestone Hall of Fame Award Winner for 1987-88. Smith was nominated for the award by the College of Applied Arts and Technology.

The broadcasting major from Lexington has maintained a 3.9 GPA while being active in several University organizations.

Smith said he learned early the importance of time management when he joined Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity during his first semester.

The key to his successful college career, Smith said, is "being involved in activities as well as taking time to have a good time"

According to Smith, this balance kept his studies from becoming "dry and stressful."

Balance was the catalyst for a successful collegiate career as well as being the reason Smith chose broadcasting as his major field of study.

"I've always enjoyed writing and speaking . . . so broadcasting seemed a logical combination" Smith said.

Following graduation Smith plans to work in the television medium. Eventually, he hopes to teach on the college level.

Five proud University instructors were chosen to receive the Excellence in Teaching Award for the academic year, 1986-87.

Dr. Ursel Boyd, professor of foreign languages, College of Arts and Humanities; Diane L. Vachon, assistant professor of home economics, College of Applied Arts and Technology; Dr. Benjamin E. Robuck, associate professor of correctional service, College of Law Enforcement; Dr. Paul C. Motely, professor of physical education, College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics; and Dr. Steven D. Falkenburg, associate professor of psychology, College of Social and Behavioral Sciences were the recipients of the highly esteemed award.

To be eligible to receive the excellence in teaching award (ETA), a faculty member must be on a regular contract as of January 15 of the year in which the award is given and must have a faculty-load assignment which includes 50 percent or more teaching for each of the immediately preceding fall and spring semesters as shown by the Faculty Load Analysis or comparable report. First year faculty are not eligible for the award since they will not have taught during the preceding spring semester.

Previous award winners are returned to the list of eligible faculty after three full academic years.

The voting depends on students, faculty and alumni. All students, including part-time students, are eligible to vote.

Each student is permitted to vote for two teachers from a list of all eligible faculty.

Faculty members are eligible to vote for the ETA if they are on the list of faculty eligible to receive the award, or if they are past recipients of the award. Each faculty member is allowed to vote for two colleagues from a list of all eligible faculty irrespective of department or college.

All alumni who earned associate, baccalaureate, or graduate degrees during the preceding three years are eligible to vote. Alumni are permitted to vote for two teachers from a list of all eligible faculty.

A maximum of five teachers are selected for the award. While there used to be a restriction that award winners must be from different colleges, this rule is no longer in affect.

To receive the award, the faculty member must receive at least one vote from two of the three voting groups—student, faculty, and alumni.

The final decision is made by the Alumni Selection Committee.

This is an extremely high honor for the faculty members to be chosen through such a strict and selective process.

Colleges Provide

The University takes pride in the diversity of its student body. The pursuit of knowledge—students working within their chosen colleges to achieve excellence—is the foundation of a university education.

The College of Allied Health and Nursing focuses on degrees pertaining to health care and maintenance. Associate degrees are available in emergency medical care, medical assisting technology, and nursing. Bachelor degrees are available in environmental health science, medical record administration, occupational therapy, and nursing.

The College of Applied Arts and Technology offers various degrees in agriculture, home economics, industrial education and technology, mass communications, and military science, including a four-year Army Reserve Officers Training Corps program and a two-year Air Force ROTC program. Aviation courses in instrumental and commercial flight are also offered.

The College of Arts and Humanities concentrates on the intellectual and expressive arts. Degrees are offered in foreign languages, art, music, philosophy, religion and theater.

Organization and Opportunity

The College of Business strives to prepare students for the ever-changing world of business. The college offers the following associate degrees: administrative, executive, legal, and medical office systems. Bachelor's degrees are offered in economics, accounting, computer information systems, finance, general business health care administration, real estate, and physical distribution management.

The College of Education prepares today's students to become tomorrow's teachers. The college offers degrees in the following areas: communication disorders, hearing impaired, special education, and elementary and secondary education.

The purpose of the College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics is to prepare students to help society relax and be healthful. The college offers associate degrees in recreation and park leadership and bachelor's degrees in communication health education, recreation and park administration, and school health education.

The College of Law Enforcement offers courses concerning community service and protection. The college awards associate degrees in business and industrial security, corrections and juvenile services, fire and safety technology, police administration, and security and loss prevention.

The College of Natural and Mathematical Sciences is concerned with the studies of various sciences. Degrees are offered in biology, chemistry, geology, computer science, earth science, environmental resources, fisheries management, forensic science, mathematics, microbiology, physics, statistics, and wildlife management.

The College of Social and Behavioral Sciences focuses on the social, political, economic and psychological development of mankind. The college offers the following degrees: anthropology, economics, geography, history, paralegal science, political science, sociology, psychology, and social work.

Staff's Diversity Adds to Milestone

After two months of the fall semester had passed, three extremely diverse individuals were summoned to 409 Jones.

A senior journalism major was informed that she was needed as the newest addition to the yearbook staff.

A sophomore English major and another senior journalism major were told their titles as managing editor and photo editor were about the change.

Kristi Spencer, Kristi Jenkins and Rob Carr became co-editors of the 1987-88 Milestone a little late in the year.

None of them seemed to realize the magnitude of the jobs they had accepted, but all were anxious to see how it would all work out.

A three-day Associated Collegiate Press Convention in St. Louis gave the new staff a chance to get to know each other before the yearbook's second deadline rolled around.

Although the title for all three editors was the same, all brought a special expertise to the yearbook production process.

Rob Carr, a senior journalism major from Independence, took photographs and organized photo layouts for the book.

Carr has lived in Kentucky, Ohio and Tennessee and has worked for several newspapers including The Commonwealth — Journal in Somerset, The Kentucky Post in Covington and The Eastern Progress.

Carr would like to become a freelance photographer or do some type of newspaper work after graduation.

Kristi Jenkins, a sophomore English major from New Boston, Ohio, handled layout and design as well as writing an occasional feature story.

This was Jenkins' second year on the Milestone staff, but her seventh year of yearbook experience.

Jenkins said she would like to teach high school English after she graduates. She said she would also like to continue her yearbook adventures after college.

Kristi Spencer, a senior journalism major from Ft. Wright, is new to the yearbook staff.

She has had two summer internships at The Kentucky Post in Covington as a general assignment reporter.

Spencer said she would like to continue her career in print journalism for a few years, but eventually move on to broadcast news.

College sports have remained one of the most popular forms of entertainment in America for many years. The athletic teams provide the show, but the cheerleaders create that unmistakable atmosphere.

The University cheerleading squad took a more traditional approach to cheering this season.

David Ghazi, a senior first year cheerleader from Louisville, said he felt that they "tried to emphasize the crowd response more than difficult cheers and stunts."

The squad has accepted its role as one of motivator. Members concentrated on focusing on the game as the show and the crowd support as a catalyst.

The 14 members had a big responsibility. It was up to them to get the crowd into the game and keep the intensity up. The hard work was worthwhile when they received an enthusiastic response.

Ghazi said that his greatest reward from cheering was "the satisfaction of supporting the team by cheering for them as well as motivating the crowd."

It is evident the satisfaction they gain because of the work they put into their sport. The cheerleaders practice three times per week with extra hours put in for special events.

One project that demanded many hours of preparation was the filming of a cheer, a sideline chant and a fight song routine for submission the Universal Cheerleaders Association National Competition.

Cheerleading is a year round sport and their work is often overlooked. The group should be commended on the job they do as they are not on scholarships and only the cost of the road trips and uniforms are provided by the University.

Cheerleading has taken on many different responsibilities over the years but motivation remains the top priority.

Imagine college sports without cheerleaders. It would be a whole new and less exciting ball game.

Delta Tau for four years.

Sisterhood and Service.

Those are the two elements that combine to make Kappa Delta Tau such a unique organization.

KDT was formed as a service sorority March 11, 1963 under the guidance of 11 women. It was the University's first sorority and it is the only one of its name and type in the U.S.

The biggest project that KDT took on this year was the campaign for Susan Morrissey, a former University student who suffers from a severe degenerative muscular disease.

Morrissey was in need of immediate surgery to correct a spinal cord stimulator, which had been surgically attached to her spine in a 1985 operation.

The device had malfunctioned and was causing a severe loss of muscular control.

Under the guidance of KDT member Charla Bushchelman, a campus-wide fund-raising campaign was organized on Morrissey's behalf.

Thanks to the hard work of KDT, Mortar Board, Alpha Gamma Delta and the College of Law Enforcement, over $3,600 was raised, exceeding the $3,000 goal.

But service is not the only aspect of the KDT organization. Friendship and sisterhood are also very important to the members.

"There's no more special gift than to give of yourself. If we just add a little ray of sunshine to one person's life, then we've accomplished what we set out to do," said Joanie Brown, a senior from Hopkinsville.

A Tradition of Excellence

The University's Reserve Officer's Training Corps (ROTC) program has established a tradition of excellence.

Since the first class of cadets graduated in 1940, about 1,800 commissioned 2nd Lieutenants have passed from Eastern's campus into various areas of leadership and responsibility in the U.S. Army.

In December 1987, the program achieved the 2nd Region Commander's Trophy for training excellence, chosen from among colleges across the nation.

Moreover, the Army Chief of Staff selected the University's program as one of the top 13 in the nation just two years ago.

"We have some quality students in the program," said Major Kenneth W. Duncan, M.S.I. chief of the program. "Leadership is primarily that we try to instill in them, leadership and ethics."

Cadets in the program also may have the privilege of joining the Ranger Club.

Graded by tactical officers, the cadets are tested on such subjects as physical fitness, M-16 rifle qualification, weapons assembly, rope bridge competition, and 10-kilometer forced march with full packs.

The ROTC cadets have a rugged daily schedule which includes physical training, leadership labs, and field training exercises.

They also hold an annual military ball at which they wear full dress uniforms.

According to Major Duncan, the training is geared toward leadership.

Duncan said he feels he has produced some good leaders for the nation's armed forces.

The Baptist Student Union is one of the largest and most active organizations on campus.

The 200 member group has a common focus—Christ.

“Everyone here is on the same team. The environment is very conducive to spiritual growth, BSU President Hunter Bates said.

The group branches off into many different sub-groups which include choir groups, drama clubs, missions, enlistment programs and even recreational teams.

The members have other interests on campus, such as Greek organizations. They do, however, spend whatever time they can at the BSU.

Members do not have to be Baptist, with the exception of the president.

Special events the BSU members are participating in this year include a weekend retreat to Radcliff, Ky. and spring break trips to cities in North Carolina and Alabama.

Weekly Tuesday night meetings are shuffled to give a flavor of variety to members.

One week there might be a visiting choir group and the next week the drama club might perform a skit.

Different values and ideas are displayed in meeting activities.

Eugene Reffett has been a member of the BSU for over four years. He said the BSU is “caring people that are open, and aren’t afraid to share their opinions.”

The Residence Hall Association, which serves as a liaison between students in campus housing and the University administration is one of two student government organizations.

Through officers' retreats and attendance at state, regional, and national conferences, hall government members acquire new programming ideas and ideas for residence improvements.

The RHA is able to improve many aspects of the Residence Hall community by implementing those ideas.

Each member of the RHA is continually striving to make the student living environment better.

The RHA encourages campus involvement by sponsoring the annual Monster Bash and Spring Bridal Show.

The organization also has stickers made for each football game to encourage spirit.

Their community involvement includes the Red Cross Blood drives and the United Way campaign.

The Resident hall community raised over $2,600 this year for the United Way.

RHA has recommended changes in the Residence Halls which include extended open house hours, and hall improvements.

The newly formed Resident Safety Committee was designed to improve safety for residents.

Several areas were stressed during RSC's safety week including rape prevention, theft prevention and fire safety.

The RHA has made many improvements in Resident Hall life. By working together, members said they feel anything is possible.

Senators' Work Rewarded With Retreat

After a controversial election, the University Student Senate organization underwent a revitalization program under the direction of Student Senate President David Nusz.

Nusz, a senior speech communications major from Lexington, said the goals set for the senate this year were to increase the number of members and make the organization more visible to the student body.

Nusz said an election was held in early February which brought in 27 new Senators to complete filling the senate.

Nusz said the senate solicited input from the University students by sending out questionnaires and flyers.

Members of the senate also went to Frankfort in February to represent the university at a rally for higher education.

"The problems with financial aid will hit Eastern extra hard since around 85 percent of the students here receive financial aid," he said.

Other important projects completed this year by the senate include renovating the student grill, organizing a Watchdog Committee to monitor school issues, and setting up a 24 hour hotline for students to call the senate on if they have problems.

Nusz said he is pleased with the progress of the senate this year.

"We wanted this year to be a rebuilding year," he said.

Nusz said he feels more students are familiar with the goals of the senate now.

A college campus is like a small community within itself. And many students live under the facade that their community is absolutely safe.

Residence Hall Association sponsored a Safety Week this year in an attempt to inform students of some of the existing dangers.

Activities were scheduled across campus dealing with topics such as rape, theft, fire and safe sex.

In addition to speeches and films, a table was set up in the Powell Building to entertain questions from students.

Departments that aided RHA during Safety Week included student affairs, housing, fire safety and theatre.

A spokesman for the RHA said the group was pleased with its first Safety Week.

THE EASTERN PROGRESS: Underestimated Experience

It's Thursday morning, and the typical University student picks up this week's edition of The Eastern Progress on his way to class. He absorbs "Police Beat" and "People Poll," a few other stories and a fast-food coupon or two, and the paper is probably discarded by midafternoon.

The student feels he is well-informed about what has happened on campus over the past week. But what he doesn't know is the tremendous amount of time and energy that has gone into producing the campus newspaper.

"The amount of work we do in such a short time is almost unreal," said Mike Marsee, the editor. "We have such a small staff, so we really have to keep moving."

"I never appreciated the Progress until I joined the staff," said copy editor Jackie Hinkle. "Now that I've seen all the long hours of hard work put into the paper, I can appreciate what we have."

Although the Progress is the often maligned by students, faculty and others in the university community, Marsee said he feels it is an important part of the University.

"No matter how much they talk about us, they still read the paper on Thursday," he said.

"I think the Progress is misunderstood by many people on campus," Marsee said. "They've got to realize we're real people. We're students with assignments and exams and all the other problems of students."

But Marsee said the staff shouldn't use its student status as an excuse. "When we make a mistake, we can't say, 'Well we're just students what do you expect?'"

But students aren't the only ones involved with the Progress. Dr. Elizabeth Fraas, a 10-year veteran of the Department of Mass Communications, now serves as Progress adviser. She said she better appreciates the work that goes into the paper.

"I never knew there was that much work involved in putting out a weekly paper," Fraas said. "It's been a learning and growing experience for me as well as the staff."

When Drs. John Monrad and Doug Reynolds set out to teach a new science class, they didn't know exactly what they were creating.

What they ended up creating was CMN 315, a general education class aimed at the non-science major.

Both instructors wanted to come up with a class that would cover the basics of science, without going into too much detail about any one subject.

CMN 315 combines geology, biology and astronomy.

While many students think of general education science classes as dull and boring, CMN offers insight into such interesting topics as the big bang theory, continental drift and reasons for the extinction of the dinosaurs.

Monrad covers the material that relates to geology while Reynolds teaches the material that concerns the natural science aspect.

While team teaching isn't that common, both instructors feel that it benefits both the students and themselves.

Phil Bowling, a senior from Flatwoods who took the class in the fall semester, felt team teaching the class was good in a lot of ways.

"You didn't get bored by either instructor's lecture," said Bowling.

Monrad looks at team teaching as a way of having someone in the class to question your lecture. "It's good to have someone to keep me on my toes," said Monrad.

Dr. Elizabeth Fraas transported a van full of students each week to the capitol to encourage face-to-face interviews between the students and key legislators.

The class was exposed to several aspects of its future careers including deadlines, long hours and sometimes not getting the story.

But the group had something tangible to keep from the class. Newspaper clippings to prove their valuable experience.

Fraas also kept copies for herself to show to the next EKU legislative network.

20 Officers Protect 20,000 Individuals

The University Division of Public Safety is a small police department acting to protect a small community.

Many students think of the campus police as security guards. But they're not.

Campus police respond to the same types of calls as any other police departments, said Lt. Jerry Sowers.

Fourteen police officers and about six cadet officers respond to calls for theft, domestic disputes, DUI and AI occurrences and even loud music complaints.

Sowers said the theft reports are the most unnecessary. "If students would just take basic precautions like locking their dorm rooms, we wouldn't have so many calls," he said.

Sowers said very few thefts are done by forceable entry—most thieves on campus simply walk through open or unlocked doors.

Sowers said the public safety division is responsible for about 20,000 people during the day when the faculty and staff are on campus.

The officers have two marked cruisers to drive, while most cadets travel on foot.

The cadets are mostly students who are hired through a work study program to make some extra money or to get some on-the-job experience with the department.

Sowers said the jurisdiction of the department is any street through, by or bordering property owned by the University.

Who wants to go to classes during the summer? Even worse, who wants to live with their professors while they're taking those classes?

For art students going to Italy this summer with University art professor Charles Helmuth and other faculty members involved in the Kentucky Institute for European Studies, these questions are answered with an exuberant "me, and when do we go."

Helmuth said KIES students study abroad for five weeks in either Austria, France, Spain, Germany, or Italy. After the five week study period, the student is free to travel throughout Europe using the student Eurail Youth pass, an extensive European train system.

Since the student's round-trip plane ticket is valid for three months, the students may see the sights of Europe for nearly two months, Helmuth said.

While studying abroad, students may live with European families or in small hotels which house, not only the students, but also the professors.

"When you live with students, you get more involved with them," Helmuth said. "You have breakfast with them. You have dinner with them."

Experience

Helmuth has been traveling abroad with KIES students since 1979.

"I taught in the Austrian program first," said Helmuth. "I taught there three or four summers, but then I was asked to develop a program in Italy."

Helmuth said he started teaching in Italy for KIES because they wanted to start a program focused on art and they knew he loved the country.

"The Italian program is focused more on art history, studio art and some Italian language, but language isn't the primary objective," said Helmuth.

Forty art students from around the country will study in Florence, Italy with professors from six state universities.

Helmuth said the same problems pop up every summer. "Some people don't have access to their Big Macs and others get home sick," Helmuth said.

Praising the program for not only its quality of education, but also the exposure students get from traveling abroad, Helmuth said, "It's a different experience to make you think about what you are and what you are doing."

The Association of Fire Science Technicians strives to spread the fire services creed: To preserve life, protect property and to promote safety.

The A.F.S.T. is a professional organization for students majoring in fire and safety engineering technology and related fields such as security and loss prevention, forensic science, emergency medical care and environmental health science.

The members attend workshops, conferences and competitions on topics like industrial risk management, fire protection engineering, fire and arson investigation, and emergency medical services.

The A.F.S.T. has various public education and public relations projects ranging from providing first aid services for Special Olympics to fire extinguisher training for dormitory resident assistants.

The group also plans fire safety programs targeted at local elementary students.

The members of the association spend many hours of their time promoting the University's fire and safety program which is ranked the third best one of its kind in the United States.

The A.F.S.T., along with the fire program at the university is continuously growing.

The fire program has recently been given approval by the Board of Regents to build a new fire and safety laboratory on Mall Drive which should be completed by fall 1988.

Dairy Operated Like Family Business

Not many students know that campus land acquainted with touchdowns and field goals used to be land for grazing and dairy herding.

The Stateland Dairy moved from the spot where Hanger Field is today.

Agriculture majors and farm employees at Stateland know many trivial tidbits about their dairy that can be attributed to intense pride.

The dairy is ranked in the top 20 of its kind in the country as well as boasting state-of-the-art equipment.

"I think that says quite a lot for the agricultural program here," said Dale Rothwell, farm manager.

Rothwell is no longer a student, but he is a University graduate.

Many students come to the University seeking an agricultural education and use it as a tool for everything from farm work to farm management.

In any event the student is given a unique chance to receive hands-on technical experience while learning theories in the classroom.

The dairy is operated just like a typical American dairy farm.

The cows are milked twice daily, forage is raised there to feed them and calves are raised there.

Agriculture students note that every cow at the farm can be traced back to the original five cows.

"It may sound silly, but they're like a big family to me, Rothwell said.

The cows are even given names like Angel, Vickie, Marcy and Punkin.

Like a regular dairy farm, Stateland seeks to return a profit.

Milk from the farm is sent to London, Ky. where it is processed and then sold under the "Flavor-Rich" label.

In the past, students at the University strived to graduate in the spring in order to participate in the elaborate ceremony.

But this year December graduates were honored with ceremonies and receptions for each of the nine colleges.

Previously, December graduates assembled together in the Keen Johnson Building with no separation of the colleges.

College deans said the new method is definitely an improvement.

Many deans had heard complaints of overcrowding at the traditional ceremonies. Many students simply did not attend to avoid the hassle.

"I think many students felt it wasn't sufficient, and I tend to agree," said Dr. Dixon A. Barr, Dean of the College of Education.

Dr. John Rowlett, vice president for academic affairs, asked respective deans to handle graduation ceremonies for their own colleges this year.

"I think we've enhanced what they've been doing before," Rowlett said.

The ceremonies were formal and degree candidates wore the traditional caps and gowns.

Some colleges gave special honors at the ceremonies that were held in buildings across campus.

1600 Become Alumni

OPPOSITE: Hanger Field was the sight of Spring Commencement. RIGHT: Elizabeth Sidwell waves to her family and friends during Commencement. BELOW: Steve Lincoln scans the full crowd for his parents.

Pride, relief and anxiety are as much a part of graduation as diplomas, tears, and mortar boards. The University conferred 1,222 degrees during the 80th spring commencement exercises at Hanger Field on May 9.

Donald R. Disney, a member of the University's Foundation Board of Directors, was the featured speaker. Disney attended the University in 1962-1963 and serves as chairman of the board of United Medical Corporation, Orlando.

Traditional summer commencement in the Van Peursen Amphitheatre was held July 20. The speaker was 1954 University graduate Robert Morgan, president of Cincinnati Financial Corporation. More than 430 degrees were presented to the candidates.

The graduates' college career ended much as it began—pride of accomplishment, relief of an ending, and anxiety toward a beginning.

A Group Acting As One

A quest for sisterhood or brotherhood, a yearning to be accepted, and a need to make a difference.

These are some of the reasons a student may choose to join a campus fraternity or sorority.

From the rush functions to philanthropy science projects, “going Greek” means hard work toward a common goal by a group acting as one.

Those who have been followers suddenly become leaders as presidents, pledge class trainers, rush chairmen and even members of Panhellenic and the Interfraternity Council.

But being Greek is not all activities and functions.

Fraternities and sororities stress meaningful goals such as academic achievement and personal development.

Through Greek involvement, lifetime bonds of friendship are formed and cherished memories are created.

Unity between black and white Greek organizations is an age old problem on campus.

Phi Beta Sigma fraternity is looking to change that problem with their secret weapon, Billy Fleming.

Fleming, a junior police administration major from Letcher, is the first white member of the black fraternity.

"White fraternities find it easier to communicate with Billy," said Steve Singleton, Sigma president.

Singleton said he thinks the barrier between black and white fraternities is caused by fundamental differences between their concepts of a fraternity.

David Townsend, a Sigma, said differences also arise as the result of fraternity rush programs.

"Their rush program is more informational and ours is more pledging," Townsend said.

Phi Beta Sigma supports a "family feeling" within the Greek system.

Zeta Phi Beta sorority, Sigma Sweethearts, Sigma Squires and the Wiz Club are all affiliates of Phi Beta Sigma. All five of the groups don blue and white as their colors.

Townsend said the "blue and white family" does things to gether as well as participating in Greek functions.

The group participated in the Delta Zeta Frat Man's Classic, the Tau Kappa Epsilon Basketball Tournament and almost every intramural sport this year.

"We'd like to invite a white fraternity to step with us," Singleton said.

"We're willing to meet every Greek organization half way."

Fleming, otherwise known as "the white shadow" said he would feel a personal benefit from bringing unity between all Greeks on campus.

The Panhellenic and Interfraternity Council provide a link between the University's Greek organizations.

Each fraternity has two delegates to the IFC, and the Panhellenic features one representative to the council from each sorority. The initiated members are elected or appointed within their fraternity or sorority depending on the individual group's guidelines.

Panhellenic

FRONT ROW: Kristy Nolan, Anne Secrest, V.P.; Bridget Hornung, Pres.; Kelley Curtin, V.P.; Leighan McKenzie. SECOND ROW: Trish Friedman, Chris Propp, Leslie Dunham, Beth Helfrick, Lisa Napier, Tracey Lafferty, Karen Bennet. THIRD ROW: Michelle Smith, Christina Warnke, Elizabeth Suter, Tracey Fisher, Nyeoe Adams, DeAnna Downing, Michelle Bollinger.

The organizations are designed to exchange information and ideas among ECU fraternities and sororities. The IFC and Panhellenic are to provide a communication network and work to create and maintain fraternal spirit at the University. The organizations also serve as a limited governing body within the Greek system.

ALPHA KAPPA ALPHA

Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority was founded nationally at Howard University in 1908. The ECU chapter was established in 1971.

Chapter philanthropies include the National Negro College Fund, United Way and Sickle Cell Anemia.

Members participate in many a variety of service projects, including the Blood Mobile, a minority Homecoming dance, and food baskets for the needy.

The AKAs are striving for academic achievement as a group. They also stress service to mankind.

Sorority colors are pink and green, the flower is the rose and the jewel is the pearl.

Delta Sigma Theta sorority was founded nationally in 1913 and established on campus in 1970.

The sorority's motto is "Intelligence is the Torch of Wisdom."

The group dedicates its' proceeds from the annual Delta Week to its philanthropy, the United Negro College Fund.

Deltas are constantly striving for academic excellence and to improving group relations between other Greeks and non-Greeks organizations. Members have participated in the Lambda Chi Alpha Watermelon Bust, the Sigma Chi Derby and the Theta Chi Quarters Contest.

Delta colors are crimson and cream and the chapter's symbol is the elephant.

Betas are known for their sporting events. They sponsor a Beta Football Tournament each year for campus Greeks.

They also hold a basketball tournament for national Beta chapters. As many as 20 teams have competed in the yearly event.

The group is concerned about the Greek system running smoothly as a whole. Therefore, they will strive to support the system.

Beta colors are pink and blue. The chapter's mascot is the dragon. Betas own a house on Hill Dale Avenue in Richmond. Dale Rothwell is chapter advisor.

The Kappa Alpha fraternity was founded on campus in 1969.

Members of the Kappa Alpha Order strive to conduct themselves as gentlemen at all times and to represent the Greek system in the best way possible.

Kappa Alphas are active in numerous campus projects, including Old South Week and the publication of Greek telephone books.

The group's philanthropy is Muscular Dystrophy. Mem-

“Unofficial fraternity houses” have caused quite a controversy in Richmond this year.

These houses are occupied by more than two or three members of the same fraternity. However, these houses are not considered official fraternity residences by the University.

To resolve potential community conflicts, the university and the Richmond City Commission established an EKU/Richmond Community Awareness committee.

The action was taken due to numerous complaints by Richmond residents about excessive partying at the unofficial houses.

University attorney Giles Black told commission members that trouble can arise when students live together in the same house, but the University has little control over them.

“If they display Greek letters and have Greek functions there, then the University has some control. But if the students just live together and belong to the same fraternity — that’s another matter,” he said.

Hayward M. “Skip” Daugherty, dean of student services, said a possible answer to the problem would be a “fraternity row” on campus.

Daugherty said on-campus fraternity housing would cost about $450,000 just to prepare the land for building on.

Two of the proposed sites are located on Summit Street and behind Keene Hall, both University owned.

If established, Black said fraternities would be encouraged to live there, but could not be forced to.

The University has also considered converting a residence hall into an all-Greek housing facility.

Daugherty said that a fraternity-row could not become reality for at least five years.

Colonels Destined For Success

The 1987 edition of Colonel football was a talented and veteran team.

According to head coach Roy Kidd the team was destined for success.

Although the Colonels were eventually stopped in the playoffs, it took the eventual I-AA winners to do it.

The season began with a loss to the University of Tennessee—Chattanooga. While the Colonel's leading rushers, Elroy Harris and James Crawford, were held under 100 yards, the Moccasins scored for a 10-0 shutout game.

The Colonels rallied in their second game against Marshall's Thundering Herd, however, proving that even if they had lost their footing previously, they hadn't lost their spirit.

The Colonel's came from behind in that game to win 37-34.

The night game drew the sixth largest stadium crowd in University history.

Colonels at the next game. The Central Florida Knights were ranked as the number 2 division team.

Running backs Harris and Crawford and quarterback Lorenzo Fields amassed 368 rushing yards as the team improved its record to 2-1 for the year.

"I thought Lorenzo came on and did a wonderful job," Kidd said.

Murray State University fell to the Colonels, 29-21, effectively curtailing the Racers' chances for an Ohio Valley Conference championship.

Crawford and Harris both broke 100 yards for the first time, a tradition for that would be repeated for the next 7 games.

17-16 to Middle Tennessee. A 52-yard field goal attempt bounced off the uprights in the final seconds of the game with the Colonels down by one point.

But the taste of victory was very sweet to the Colonels when they whipped the Youngstown State Penguins.

The 14-7 win was a step that eventually led to an automatic bid to the I-AA playoffs.

Eastern steamrolled home and rolled over Austin-Peay with a score of 50-70. After the first 15 minutes of play the Colonels were leading 30-0 and were well on their way to their 6th win in 8 games.

The third time proved a charm as the Colonels traveled to knock off Tennessee Tech 44-8. ECU presented an excellent running attack, compiling 441 yards.

In the season's final week the Colonels continued their domination of opponents by beating Morehead State's Eagles, 23-0.

That win enabled the Colonels to tie Youngstown with a 5-1 mark in OVC play. This provided a rematch with Western in the first round of Division I-AA playoffs.

The Colonels entered the playoffs with high hopes, and started off strong with a 40-7 defeat of Western.

The Colonels then traveled to Monroe, La. to face the North Eastern Louisiana Indians.

The game began upbeat for the Colonels as they took a 7-0 lead at halftime. Both teams picked up the pace in the second half with the Colonels falling short by one point as Northeast Louisiana's Teddy Garcia hit a 48 yard field goal with 14 seconds left.

Coach Kidd said he thought the Colonels could have won it had the game been played at home.

The University golf team, which has won five consecutive OVC titles, posted another successful conference finish as the Colonels came away with a second place finish in the conference tournament.

Bruce Oldendick, a senior from Florence, placed the team with consistent rounds during the weekend tournament. Oldendick was named to the All-OVC team for the third time in his career as a member of the Colonel team.

Coach Lew Smither was pleased with the overall performance of his team, noting "We played better than our average as a team." The team looked forward to a successful autumn season.

Lady Colonels Post Eighth Straight Winning Season

The University's volleyball team chalked up its eighth straight winning season with a 20-13 record and a schedule that featured some of the best teams in the region.

The Lady Colonels also capped off a string of 49 consecutive wins against Ohio Valley Conference opponents dating back to 1983.

Before the 1987 season goes in the books as the first year the Colonels did not win the OVC championship, Coach Geri Polvino would like to set the record straight.

"We didn't lose to a weak Morehead team," she said, "Morehead wanted to beat Eastern really bad. We found ourselves at a time in our program where we were a little bit vulnerable."

Polvino's team began the season as an in-experienced group, but many players quickly contributed in various positions by the end of the season.

"Every dimension of our program was young," Polvino said.

Seniors Mary Granger and Deb Winkler provided the leadership for the squad, both on and off the floor.

"Deb gave us visibility in terms of performance and inspiration," she said. Winkler was named as the OVC North Division's most valuable player and was an All-Tournament selection in every tournament the Colonels participated in during the season.

In addition, sophomore, Patty Kantz stepped in as setter and performed well, Polvino said. Walk-on sophomore Kelly Ward and freshman Becky Baker and Sue Antkowiak

Polvino said she would like the year remembered as a year that the sport of volleyball "established itself in the OVC as more than a one-school sport."

It won't get any easier for the Colonels to win future conference titles, Polvino said, although the potential is there for a strong team. "As soon as that potential matures, we'll be in good shape."

Unprecedented Success for Field Hockey Team

1987 has been a year of unprecedented victories for the University's field hockey team.

The Colonels proved that change can sometimes be a good thing. This was the team's first year under the coaching of Linda Sharpless.

"I didn't know what to expect from this team when I came here," Sharpless said. "We just played well together."

Playing well is just what led the team to a record 14-7 season.

The season highlight was also a first for the team. They won four out of five games to take the Midwest Indepen

TEAM FACES COMPETITIVE SCHEDULE

The University basketball Colonels played a competitive schedule this year, against tougher teams than they have faced in previous years.

The Colonels faced teams such as Indiana, Wyoming, and Louisville, all top ranked teams.

Because of the tougher schedule the Colonels started out the season winning only five of their first ten games.

In the opener the Colonels scored 110 points against UNC Asheville, paving their path to the Marshall Invitational Tournament where they emerged in second place losing to the Southern Conference leader, Marshall, by one point.

Playing against Indiana and Louisville exposed the Colonels to two experienced teams just before they traveled to Casper, Wyoming and the Cowboy shootout.

Fifth ranked Wyoming came out on top with 12 points over the Colonels, after the University defeated Detroit 67-55.

The Colonels entered OVC play after a road game against Western Kentucky.

Destined to subdue Tennessee State twice, the initial meeting produced a final score of 84-70.

In the second contest the Colonels outlasted the Tigers 114-97.

Along the way, the University compiled a score of two losses from Murray State and Austin Peay, and earned wins over Wilmington College and Morehead State.

With the season still in front of them the Colonels, 2-2 in the OVC, were 9-0 at home with a victory over Middle Tennessee.

Colonels' coach Max Good spoke about the tough schedule. "It's been a very strung out and difficult schedule," Good said. "We knew it would be difficult but I think we've come back well and performed well."

Good credits three athletes; Jeff McGill, an outstanding senior, Bobby "Cat" Collins and Tyrone Howard.

"Those three people have been the cornerstone of our team this year," Good said.

According to Good the whole team has played an excellent year, but the team won't play a competitive schedule next year.

Lady Colonels Suffer Setbacks

Plagued by the loss of players and an especially tough schedule, the Lady Colonels struggled through a rough season in 1988.

From their opening exhibition game against the Australian National team, the Lady Colonels fought through their first 8 games searching for a victory.

That victory finally came against Tennessee State on Jan. 4 with a decisive final score of 72-59 in a road game.

After a loss to Dayton, 72-62, the Lady Colonels traveled to East Tennessee to clinch another win. Winning by three, the University's team squeaked out a final score of 86-89.

Morehead then fell under the Lady Colonels by one on the home court of Alumni Coliseum. Final score: 78-79.

According to assistant coach Angela Botta, the Lady Colonels played a tough season. "We played some tough teams, but we held up well," Botta said. "We're coming into our own."

Still, the Lady Colonels faced a tough time for their next 3 games, losing to the University of Cincinnati, Murray State, and Austin Peay.

Another bout with Tennessee state brought yet another victory for the Lady Colonels, 86-74.

Youngstown State and the highly touted Louisville team produced excellent, yet disappointing games for the fans of the Lady Colonels, with Youngstown played away and Louisville played on our home court.

A high point in the season was the Lady Colonels' win over Tennessee Tech, their first over them in 9 years.

Midway through the season and 4-5 in tournament play, the Lady Colonels are expected to hold their own against their remaining opponents.

"We're going to have a lot of experience next year," said Botta. "We're losing two seniors, but a lot of them will be returning."

For the Lady Colonels, it's a wide open road.

The pool is empty and many of the athletes have left the University.

After several attempts to raise money to save it, the Eels swim team was dropped from the University athletic department.

According to Dr. Charles Whitlock, executive assistant to the president, the team was dropped because the athletic department could not contain costs within the budget.

He said the cuts are necessary because of increases in tuition, food, room and travel costs within the university.

According to Don Combs, university athletic director, the athletic department's overall budget was not decreased by the loss of the swim team.

Instead, the swim team's $85,000 budget was divided among other sports to be used for scholarships.

Because the money was not cut from the budget, the university lost money this year.

Eleven of the 29 students on the swim team went to other schools this year. Another 10 potential new swimmers were forced to go elsewhere in order to swim.

Coach Dan Lichty said the NCAA allows for $3,720 a year for each student in scholarship funds for in-state athletes.

The NCAA allows $2,000 more each year in scholarship funds for each out of state student.

Because only six of the eleven students who left were on partial scholarship, over $50,000 in revenue for the university left with them.

In addition to that revenue that would come in the form of tuition, fees, books, room and board, the state pays the university $3,000 per year in full time equivalency (FTE) funds for each full-time student in class.

If the 10 new swimmers would have received average amounts of scholarships, the university lost over $50,000 in revenue and full time equivalent lency funds.

Lichty said the administration did not look down the road when they decided to drop the swim team.

"They not only dropped the swim team, but they also cut off a very valuable alumni support group.

Combs said it is likely that the swim team will not be the last sport dropped.

"A lot of sports that are beyond NCAA numbers needed are being dropped by universities across the country," Whitlock said.

Before the swim team was cut, the university had 17 intercollegiate sports. Combs said the NCAA only considers 12 of them necessary.

Cindy Deeler, a junior ex-swimmer, said she feels the university is making a mistake by going to less sports.

"The university is not academically known enough to draw students without sports," she said.

Women Win Sixth OVC Title

The women's cross country team has once again won the right to say "We are the champion," by capturing first place in the Ohio Valley Conference.

This is the sixth year that the ECU women have clinched that title.

The team, composed primarily of freshman and sophomores, did not buckle under the pressure of defending their title.

University cross country coach Rick Erdmann said this was the first year that he thought the team might lose.

"They're a lot better than

Among the top performers were Pam Raglin, Marilyn Johnson, Chris Snow and Allison Kotouch.

Raglin was the best individual runner, Johnson was ranked nationally in 1986 and Kotouch received Academic All-American honors as a sophomore.

Mens Cross Country Team Suffers Setback

A positive and confident men's cross country team ended up disappointed at the end of the season.

Tim Moore, considered the team's top returning runner, was out for the season in September due to illness.

The 11 lettermen and a fine group of freshmen and junior college transfers made up the roster.

The experienced team, however, failed to live up to expectations, placing third in the final Ohio Valley Conference standings.

Top returning runners included Jeff Goodwin, Andre Williams and Jerome Dorsey.

Newcomers to the University that contributed are Tom Walker, Junior Serrano, Reggie Cooper and Eddie Walden.

Peter Mundin, a sophomore, transfer student from Bonn, West Germany proved to be an asset to the team as a middle distance runner.

Track Teams Uphold Reputation

Strong in both relay teams and individual efforts, Head Coach Rick Erdmann's men's track team upheld the reputation of the University's track and field program.

Eleven lettermen returned and several freshmen and junior college transfers joined the team. Leadership was provided by returning runners Jeff Goodwin, Andre Williams and Jerome Dorsey. With the help of newcomers Tom Walker, Reggie Cooper, Junior Serrano, and Eddie Walden, the team had the strength to compete with top teams in the region.

The season highlight was Jeff Goodwin's victory in the 800-meter event in the Jesse Owens Classic. The 4x220 relay team also captured first place in the Mason Dixon Games.

The University has typically been competitive in sprint relays. "We have been one of the premier sprint relay teams east of the Mississippi during the past five years," said Erdmann.

At the end of last season, Head Coach Rick Erdmann predicted his team would rank highly in years to come. The 1986-87 women's track team ranked sixteenth in the nation in the NCAA division.

The women dominated the Becky Boone Relays, capturing first place in ten out of twenty events. A world record was set by the 220 meter shuttle hurdle team, consisting of Gracie Brown, Charmaine Byer, Karen Robinson, and Jackie Humphrey.

Individuals receiving top honors were Pam Raglin and Jackie Humphrey. Both received Indoor Track All-American honors at the NCAA Championship as well as being named All-Americans. Humphrey also set a school record in the 100 meter hurdles and qualified for the 1988 Olympic trials.

In addition, distance runner, Allison Kotouch, received Academic All-American honors. Linda Davis and Kathy Jones were valuable contributors to the distance relays.

Erdmann hopes this success in athletics as well as in academics continues.

Team Finishes Revived and Determined

"We got off to a good start with a record of 9-1 on the spring trip. We played well but had two league losses," said Colonel coach Jim Ward. Those two league losses were enough to keep the team from a fourth consecutive OVC title.

Senior Robert Moore was looked to for leadership and he came through for his team. He was named OVC Northern Division Player of the Year along with being recognized as an NCAA All-American.

Joining Moore on the All-OVC team was Jeff Cruse, Frank Kremblas, and Rob Rizzone. Jim Ward was also honored as the Northern division Coach of the Year.

The Colonels, backed by Coach Ward's optimism, are looking forward to beginning a new season. They have some talented players returning and a positive outlook.

Coach Ward said he thought his team was "revived and determined to be conference champions and return to NCAA tournament play."

Young Team Finishes Strong

Not only did the women's tennis team have a positive attitude going into the season, but team members also had the first and second highest GPA among women athletes. "We can boast about our academic as well as our athletic abilities," said Coach Sandy Martin.

Martin has been the head coach for four seasons. She had a good outlook on her young team and her only senior finished strong, also. Laura Hesselbrock finished third in the Ohio Valley Conference at the number two singles position.

Martin enjoyed her team's steady progress. "In one year the Lady Colonels came from fifth place to third in the OVC," she said. That team consisted of five underclassmen.

Pam Wise and Dee Cannon teamed up to finish as the number one doubles runner-ups. Third-seed doubles team, Traci Parrella and Tina Cate took third place in the OVC.

The University's men's tennis team compiled a 10-12 record for this season, coming on strong with victories in three of the last four matches.

Coach Tom Higgins fought coach's frustration with his team's record. "We are better than that. Those kids can play better."

The Colonels closed their season with an eighth place finish in the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament. Kevin Lindley and Brian Marcum placed third in the number three doubles position. Jim Laitta and Chris Brown finished fourth in the number two doubles position. Chuck Jody, playing at number six singles, finished fourth to post the team's top OVC finishes.

Jerry Goodin tried out for the University basketball team as a walk-on his freshman year thinking he could be an asset to the team.

"I walked-on with the idea that I wouldn't get to play much, but to work hard in order to play later," Goodin said.

He had the right idea just as many other athletic walk-ons with his type of dedication do.

University coaches hold their walk-on athletes in high esteem because they are extras that don't have to be included in scholarship budgets.

However, an elite few walk-on and win scholarships through hard work.

Men's basketball coach Max Good holds his walk-on tryouts at 5:30 a.m. in order to find the most serious athletes.

Good said he respects Goodin, who won a scholarship this year. Good said Goodin never misses a practice.

Volleyball Coach Geri Polvino said she actively recruits walk-on athletes.

Polvino said she can convert athletes who participated in other sports in their past into volleyball players.

Proud Football Coach Roy Kidd boasts a true walk-on success story.

John Klingel, who now plays defensive end for the Philadelphia Eagles, was a walk-on football player at the University during his college years.

Kidd said many more athletes try out for the football team as walk-ons than he could ever use. However a select few squeeze into the lines.

Kidd said walk-ons can be successful players if they just "keep trying and plugging."

Goodin and Humphrey Chase a Dream

Two University students will soon be given the chance to vie for a spot on the U.S. Olympic track team.

Jackie Humphrey, 22, and Jeff Goodwin, 24, are both hopefuls for the team.

"Every since I can remember it has been a dream of mine to compete in the Olympics," Humphrey said.

The computer electronics major and industrial technology major has been running track since she attended junior high school in Jacksonville, N.C.

She will be trying to qualify in the 100 meter hurdles, an event she currently has a best time of 13:06 seconds in.

"I think I have a real good chance," Humphrey said.

She has a good record in races against those runners who could take her place in Seoul.

Goodin isn't quite as confident as Humphrey but said he feels he has a chance.

The broadcasting major from Louisville has been running track since he was 12 years-old.

His best time is 1:47.75 in the 800 meter event, which he will try to qualify in.

"My opponents probably don't think I have a chance, but I think my chances are moderate to average," Goodin said.

The Summer Olympic tryouts will be held in Indianapolis this July.

Humphrey and Goodin, along with thousands of other athletes, will get their chance to try to go for the gold.

The yearbook is finished. The year is over. Thus passes another milestone in the history of the University.

These are the years that are remembered forever and immortalized within the bindings of this book.

The 1988 Milestone will stand forever as tribute to the year we cried, laughed, loved and learned about ourselves and our plans for the future.

This was a year of breakthroughs and of setbacks, of triumph and defeat, of beginnings and endings and this book chose no favorites.

Editors' Notes

I never thought I'd see the day when this book came to an end, but thank God it's finally finished and outta here.

Putting this book together hasn't been one of the funnest things I've ever done.

I have had more headaches and problems dealing with some of the content and issues in here than you can imagine.

There were many times when I should have been studying, but instead I printed this and that, trying to get things over with, the sooner the better. I hope it payed off.

A lot of people helped in the production of this book. Some in more ways than others, but they helped. They deserve a round of applause.

First I want to thank my family. Now they can see what I've been doing all these years.

To my dog Dusty, your coolness reminds me of how we should all be.

Working with Kristi J. and Kristi S. made life bearable. Beer at 90's forever.

I couldn't have existed without the help of Jody "Ted" Warner and Tom Penegor.

Thanks to the last minute help of Mike Marsee and others at the Progress, couldn't have done it without your great sports copy.

The one person who stood by me, helped me, put up with my attitude and has been my friend is Sheri Sparks. Thanks buddy.

I hope this book reminds you of Eastern in the years to come and I hope you enjoy it. Take care.

Rob Can

I feel like a parent on a child's eighteenth birthday, sinking back in my leather chair and reflecting. I have nurtured and guided this book, bandaged its wounds, been up with it all night and stood beside it through thick and thin. Now I am going to send it out to be judged by all—to be praised and disagreed with.

Appropriately I begin by thanking my family: Dick, Faye and Kelli Jenkins. My mother, who taught me love and dedication, and Daddy who made me strong and independent. All those things are in this book. You are a wonderful pair and I love you. Kelli, my biggest fan and most critical critic, thank you for the youthful inspiration.

Next my mentors. Robert Hughes, for trusting me and never letting me forget quality and tradition. Sam Maples, for showing me to do what makes you happy first. Be happy Sam.

No one understands what I have given to this book better than Gary Grove. He has patiently understood so many times when he took the backseat and I went to the office. You have been wonderful; now there's time for us. I love you, Gary.

Finally the two people who made this possible—Rob and Kristi S. Thank you Rob for helping me put this all in prospective and knowing just when to go to 90's and bring in a "relief pitcher."

Kristi S. What can I say to someone who has become one of my closest friends in such a short time? Thank you for your professionalism and confidence.

It's over. Was it worth it? Yes, I have learned a lot about people, about taking care of #1 first and about being truthful. Thank you all! I have given so much of myself and you have returned it unselfishly. Enjoy!

Kristi Jenkins

I feel as though one of my prized possessions has been taken away.

The book is finished I have no more need to worry, to be creative when I can hardly stay awake, or to be cheerful to my co-workers when we all feel like screaming.

This book will always be a very special part of my life because I gave so much of myself to it.

I must take this opportunity to thank those loved ones who understood why they saw very little of me this year and those who helped make it all happen.

Thanks to my mother, Joyce Straub for listening to my homesick phone calls, keeping me going, making trips to Richmond, and simply for caring.

Thanks to Susan and Don, my sister and brother, for thinking of me and for always asking "when will you be home?"

A very special thanks to Phillip Nathan Cox. You were always there to walk me home, bring food to the office, and listen to my complaints day-after-day with never ending devotion and concern. I couldn't have done it without you Babe.

And of course there's Kris and Rob. Kris, you've become one of my closest friends in a very short period of time. Never forget the hours we've spent in the office working, eating, worrying and talking about where we'd rather be.

Thank you Rob for your comic relief and your willingness to do what it took to get the job done.

To the students of ECU I hope you all enjoy this book. We've give our all to make it a good one for you.

Kristi Spencer
